

1.4.2 Preview

Up next, we have these two more informative pieces to build: the "What We Do" and "What You Do" sections.

Here's how they look in the mock-up:

This lesson might feel like a bit of a breather because we won't need to use any complex CSS properties like floats or positioning. But a few new concepts will still come into play.

Here's a high-level overview of how we'll do this:

1. Fill in the HTML content, adding placeholder text.
2. Add the new icon images. You'll work with a new image format (SVG) for the "What You Do" section.

3. Style the "What We Do" section. You'll create new CSS rules to style this section's typography and box model properties.
4. Style the "What You Do" section. You'll create new CSS rules to style this section, and use multiple class attributes in the same element.
